

Nyon, November 18th, 2008.

To: Sam Palmisano, CEO of IBM

Dismissal of union activist at IBM Turkey

Dear Sir,

We are disappointed to learn that a reputable company such as IBM is failing to respect recognised union rights and has instead resorted to victimising union leaders through unfair dismissals.

The right to represent workers without hindrance is a fundamental union right enshrined in the ILO Conventions for which no union representative should be punished. The action taken by your company goes against ILO Convention on Workers' Representatives and should be rescinded forthwith.

As a global union representing over 20 million workers in 900 unions in over 150 countries worldwide, we condemn the action taken by IBM and demand the immediate reinstatement of Nedim Akay who was fired Monday (November 17th), followed by good faith negotiations between IBM's management and the union.

UNI Global Union and its Turkish affiliate will fight with all the means in their hands to get the recognition of unions' rights at IBM Turkey and the reinstatement of those unfairly fired. Please allow us to remind you that IBM declared you "...will respect the legal rights of its employees to join or to refrain from joining worker organizations, including labor organizations or trade unions. IBM respects the rights of employees to organize, and makes managers at all levels aware of those rights....." – IBM Policies: Freedom of association

I look forward to a positive response.

Yours sincerely,